

AIMS

1. To extend the understanding of compaction/degradation of Namoi grey clays (developed in previous project) to cover the range of soil types important for irrigated cotton.
2. To classify the various soil types according to their susceptibility to degradation under a given set of conditions.
3. Hence to provide consultants, extension workers with guidelines for assessing compaction susceptibility of their soil types.