

New exhibitors, new products at the Australian Cotton Trade Show

The cotton industry Development and Delivery (D&D) Team will have a significant presence on the ground at the Australian Cotton Trade Show on May 29 and 30 in Moree. The team will also be coordinating the Industry Forums at the event.

Among the topics to be addressed are two dear to the hearts of growers in every cotton region – workers and the weather! How do you get workers and how do you hang on to them? Why do you get the weather you do and how do you hang on to the farm when you're getting it?

A record crop of over 5,000,000 bales last season has certainly contributed to the general optimism and the current estimates of over 4,300,000 bales for the 2013 season will do nothing to dampen the spirits of exhibitors and growers alike. Exhibitor bookings are going very well and already include more than 20 companies who are attending the trade show for the first time or who are returning to the industry after a long spell.

New products on display will include innovative tillage tools; round bale handling; new environmentally responsible pest control products; the latest in irrigation modernisation options; new irrigation gate and trash elevator designs; precision guidance and crop sensor units; and state of the art water and futures trading.
